Mental Vitality:

Keep loved ones mentally stimulated to maintain vitality. Regular mental exercise can help memory and contributes to an individual's optimism about life. We make mental exercise an integral part of our daily care through conversation, reminiscing, storytelling, reading, playing games and other activities a client enjoys.

Physical Activity:

Even moderate amounts of ambulation and exercise contribute significantly to an individual's health by improving balance, flexibility, strength, and range of motion. Staying active and strong can improve a person's outlook on life and enhance independence.

Social Engagement:

Surrounding an individual with friends, family and activities people love can bring untold enjoyment. We understand how important this is so we help clients stay in touch with friends, attend social, religious, and cultural events, or simply have the opportunity to interact with others.
